Advice for Travellers

As of August 06, there were no autochthonous cases of Zika in Florianópolis. More importantly, the city is located in a region with fewer incidences of Aedes Aegypti (mosquitoes found to be the primary vector for spreading Zika). You may want to be cautious nevertheless, and bring your own repellent (or buy one at a local drugstore or supermarket). Beware of repellent sprays because of airport security policies. You may also want to check more detailed instructions at CDC, Anvisa, or WHO, among others.

Electricity

Electricity voltage in Florianópolis is 220V. The Brazilian plug model is compatible with the European one, and many hotels offer wall sockets with both voltages (pay attention to warning signs on the socket voltage, if any).
